In the Specification

Please replace the paragraph beginning at page 3, line 2, with the following rewritten paragraph:

-- A web site is broken up into main topical content areas. Each area shows a list of content items that the user can link to, displayed using views. A site map and table of contents read these views to determine what the user should see. The site map is a high level category oriented view, and the table of contents is a more detailed view, getting lower level [[to]] content items. Each time the user requests the site map or table of contents, an agent is executed to "lookup" into the content views, thereby [[giving]] displaying to the user the very latest content items.--.
